

FRENCH RETURN WITH IDEA OF A POLITICAL PACT

Naval Conference Plunges Into Political Aspects of Disarmament

A VERY BUSY WEEK-END

Nocturnal Session of Long Discussion Tires Japanese Delegates

By Harry R. Flory
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Mar. 8.—Abandoning its former practice of leisurely week-enders, the London Naval Conference plunged into the political aspects of disarmament today faced with the realization that France is determined to obtain embodiment of a security pact in any naval treaty the parley may achieve.

"The French have returned to London," a high British official told International News Service, "with the idea of a political pact firmly set in their minds."

But Aristide Briand, French Foreign Minister, and head of his delegation, has made it known that America need not be a party to such a pact.

The day's program bristled with important discussions between the various delegations.

Senator David A. Reed conferred lengthily with Japanese Ambassador Tsumoto Matsudaira on the cruiser problem.

Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow talked for a long time with Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald at the Foreign Office. They discussed Briand's navy demands and the projected pact of guarantee in the Mediterranean.

Arthur Henderson, British Foreign Secretary, bearded M. Briand himself at the latter's Hotel Carlton headquarters to mull over the security treaty demand.

The French leader was to be Secretary Stimson's guest for tea at the latter's country place, Stanmore, this afternoon. At Chequers, the Prime Minister's country residence, Briand and a French naval expert is to go into a huddle with Premier MacDonald tomorrow to tackle the political aspects of the situation fully.

LATE NEWS

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Mar. 8.—(INS)—Firemen today found the mutilated body of a young woman in the smoldering ruins of a summer resort bungalow on the shore of Deep Lake, near Lake Villa. She had been burned beyond recognition. Early efforts to identify the body proved fruitless, for both legs, both arms, and the head were missing. Authorities were unable to determine whether the missing members had been hacked off or burned away by fire.

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 8.—(INS)—A large black bear was killed by a policeman while walking his beat in West Philadelphia early today. The huge beast was slain while attempting to attack workers in a garage at 40th and Ogden streets. It had aroused scores of residents in the neighborhood. Police are trying to find where the animal came from. It is believed that it may have been the one seen with an organ grinder in the vicinity several days ago.

MEDIA, Pa., Mar. 8.—(INS)—Howard M. Cloud, 72-year old well-known orchardist of Concord Township, has on file in the Delaware County Court here today a petition seeking a divorce from the wife he married only two years ago. His first wife died when he was 65.

COUNTY FIREMEN CONVENE TONIGHT AT MORRISVILLE

Bucks Association Expects A Large Gathering to Assemble in Convention

INTERESTING PROGRAM

Ladies' Auxiliary Will Hold Meeting at Same Place and Hour

MORRISVILLE, Mar. 8.—This evening will bring delegates and guests from all parts of Bucks County here to attend the quarterly convention of the Bucks County Firemen's Association, to be held in the Capitol View Fire House on Pennsylvania avenue.

The Morrisville Department will entertain the Association, and the two local companies are working together with excellent co-operation to make the affair a success. A joint committee appointed by President George W. Duke, of the Capitol View Company, has completed all plans for the meeting and serving of refreshments at the close, and a very interesting time is promised the delegates and all others attending.

This will be the largest gathering of the volunteer firemen to be seen here since the annual convention and parade which was held in Morrisville in 1926, and which proved to be a decidedly successful affair.

The Ladies Auxiliaries of the two local companies will also act as hostesses to the representatives of the Ladies Auxiliaries of the county, and will hold their meeting in the Sunday School room of the Episcopal Church.

After the business meeting the ladies will join the firemen at the Capitol View Fire House, where refreshments will be served to everyone. One of the most important matters to come before the meeting will be the selection of the time and place for the annual convention and parade. This must be settled at this time to enable the town which decides to stage this affair, to make plans for the annual gathering, which is usually a very large affair.

All local delegates are urged to attend this meeting, as it is not very often that Morrisville has the honor of entertaining this gathering.

REPORTS INDICATE PROSPEROUS YEAR FOR TRAVEL CLUB

Officers and Committees Review Accomplishments of Past 12 Months

HOME IS MAIN FEATURE

Establishment of Club's Own Meeting Place Long The Dream of Members

The numerous reports submitted by the officers, standing and special committees at the annual business meeting of the Bristol Travel Club yesterday afternoon showed that the past year has been one of the most successful and outstanding in the club's history.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Frank Lehman, president for the past two years, and through efforts of the many committees appointed to equip the new home on Cedar street, the home became a splendid reality, one of which each member is now rightfully proud. This was mentioned yesterday as being the most outstanding piece of work of the year.

Chairmen of the special committees appointed some months ago to work for and plan the equipment of the building reported yesterday. The committeewomen told of the method of raising monies and itemized what articles had been purchased and donated.

The results of these committees' work were reported by the following chairmen: Mrs. Henry E. Ancker, furniture; Mrs. Russell Burton, draperies; Mrs. Frank Lehman, chairs; Mrs. James LaRue, kitchen equipment; Mrs. Walter Pitonka, grounds. During the afternoon it was mentioned that the club home has been used on 37 occasions since its opening.

The treasurer's report given by Mrs. Lehman for the treasurer, Mrs. Thomas G. Hawkes, showed that the sum of $2,044 had been raised during the year, a goodly portion of this amount having been used for purchase of equipment and improvements to the structure. A fair balance was shown for the treasury. Mrs. Thomas Scott and Mrs. Serrill Douglass were appointed as auditors.

Other reports of the afternoon included: Recording secretary, Mrs. Horace Burton; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. Doyle Webb; program committee, Mrs. William G. Muckman and Mrs. Emil Metzger. By the recording secretary's report it was shown that the average attendance has been 42, the largest number present at any one session being 55. The membership now numbers 74. It was brought to light in the corresponding secretary's report that 19 members have been added to the roster during the past year. Mrs. Buckman mentioned that the club has not deviated from the dates of the meetings or the subject matter during the last twelve months.

For the social committee Mrs. Harry Headley reported, with Mrs. Theodore B. Megargee's report for the dramatics and art committee being read by Mrs. Roy Tracy. The workings of the ways and means committee was given for Mrs. Louis C. Spring, chairman, by Mrs. Linton Martin. Mrs. Marburg D. Weagley, who heads the music committee, announced that musical numbers had been presented at 11 out of 12 meetings.

Perkasie Firemen Want Law Repealed

PERKASIE, Mar. 8.—Volunteer firemen of this borough last night passed a resolution asking for the repeal of Ordinance No. 136 which places a ban on all Sunday amusements and sports and which was passed over Burgess Groff's veto several weeks ago.

The adoption of the resolution came at the end of a heated session in which discussions became so loud they could be heard on the street outside the building. The vote on the resolution passed two to one. The resolution will be presented to Council on April 7.

DOLLAR WHEAT

Sudden collapse of wheat prices during the last few days has given the federal farm board its first practical experience with price control as a farm relief measure. From the viewpoint of the board and the wheat growers the experience was not a happy one.

Wheat prices fell in Kansas City to the dreaded dollar level in defiance of all the rules by which the farm board hoped to keep them at a much higher figure. At the close of the first day of the bear market, the board estimated its paper losses at $2,000,000, losses that will become real losses if there is no recovery on the wheat exchanges.

What concerns the farmer who has wheat to sell and who will have a new crop coming in within a few months is the fact that farm relief legislation and the farm board with millions at its command failed to prevent a drop to the lowest level in 15 years.

Of principal interest to the farm board and the white house is what caused the sudden deflation. Some sleeplessness and much dark suspicion are inevitable in these quarters.

There are grounds for suspicion in the fact that a multitude of speculators began selling at the same moment in various parts of the country. If the price was forced down by a group of bear operators then there should be an early recovery to the level that prevailed just before the crash. Chairman Legge, of the farm board, bases his optimistic outlook for the immediate future on this theory and on crop prospects for 1930.

But other explanations for the misbehavior of wheat prices have been advanced. There are rumors of movement abroad to break Canadian and American wheat markets and buy vast stores of wheat at panic prices. Another theory is that wheat was involved in a speculative selling panic similar to that in the stock markets last fall. Overstocked wheat warehouses may have been another deciding factor.

Whatever the cause, the situation has not simplified the job of the farm board.

Never yet have people scorned laws made by wise, sincere and honorable men.

Yet many men have missed fame solely because they had names hard to remember.

How much the world owes to fools who didn't know it couldn't be done and went ahead and did it.

Usually you can tell by looking at a man that his idea of worthwhile achievement is passing other cars.

This is about the season of the year when we begin to admit that we haven't made good our promise to ourself (or was it a threat?) to have more money at this season than we had last year.

"GENERAL CRACK"

GEORGE PREEDY

Copyright 1929 by Dodd Mead & Co., Inc.
 The Warner Bros. & Vitaphone production starring John Barrymore, is based on this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Lovely Princess Eleonora is the decisive pawn in the game of diplomacy which will decide whether King Leopold is to be Emperor or merely a figurehead. He has offered General Crack, soldier of fortune, the hand of his sister the Archduchess, as dowry, if he will take his side. Crack has refused, but on warning Eleonora. At a crucial interview, attended by both suitors, Archduchess decides in favor of Leopold and Crack retreats. Count Hensdorff, the king's adviser, urges Leopold to yield his claim in favor of Crack.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

But the keen, inquisitive gaze of Hensdorff, his tormentor, nerved him; he made an effort to control his confusion, his fear of, and repugnance to, his task.

"I will," he declared, "see this man myself. Ask him to come here, now—I must overlook his insolence."

"Ask whom, sire?"

"This General Crack—ask him to come."

In half an hour Christian was there, facing Leopold in the small anteroom to the bedchamber that had been given him in the Château Schönbuschel.

"We have come, Highness," the Bavarian said with dignity, "to a point when we do not need a go-between. What there is to settle, we can settle ourselves."

"No doubt," answered Christian. "It is, sire, one to me who settles the matter. But it must be today that it is settled."

"Doubtless," replied Leopold, tolerating him with an effort, "you know how I am pressed. And my advisers think you are the man I need."

"Sire, I have heard all this from Count Hensdorff and gave him my answer."

"Not too civilly, I think," said Leopold, firing up. "By Heaven, Monsieur, you make it difficult for me!"

"Circumstance, not I, makes the difficulty," remarked Christian unmoved. "It is not easy to beg favors of one, sire, you dislike."

"I have not disliked you," protested Leopold.

"You have disregarded me," replied Christian. "You do not willingly turn to me now; you may as well, sire, have matters clear."

"And you as well keep courteous," interrupted Leopold haughtily. "Remembering that I speak to Caesar? But it is not my courtesy you want to buy, sire."

"No," replied Leopold, mustering all his patience. "I bargain with you for your sword, Highness. If you will take command of all my forces—"

"I want Anhalt-Dessau's daughter," said Christian, coldly. "I go neither up nor down from that demand."

"I will not give it," replied Leopold, with a shuddering resolution.

"Then I daresay that we shall meet on the battlefield, sire, for I go at once to join the Queen of Hungary's husband."

"Why are you so set on this lady?" he asked.

"Why are you so set on withholding her?" counter-demanded Christian.

"Anhalt-Dessau has already refused her to you—"

"He will withdraw that refusal if you bid him—when Caesar is out of the lists, General Crack may be good enough."

Leopold looked away, out of the window, to refresh himself by that exquisite expanse of sunny landscape, and to be rid of the sight of that cold showy face General Crack bent on him.

"I," continued the implacable soldier, "am no more eager to serve under you, sire, than you are eager to employ me. But since I must set some man up, it may as well be you if you will pay my price."

"Any price but the price you ask—"

"You have nothing else to offer that I care about," smiled Christian.

"Neither your honors, sire, nor your sister tempt me."

"This was too much for Leopold; he threw down the dispatches into the window seat."

"Then you must go," he declared hotly, "for I see we can conclude no business."

"Shall I tell Count Hensdorff so?" asked Christian mockingly. "Come, sire, do not make all this delay and question. I do not ask what you should grudge."

The words made Leopold ashamed of the weight he had given to his own speech; he felt insignificant before the other's irony; this time yesterday he had not seen her—a girl in a wood! he might so soon forget; he felt exhausted by his own effort at strength and resolution.

Count Hensdorff and Father St. Nikola (who had accompanied the dispatch rider) entered showing grave faces; neither of them had trusted Leopold to bring this momentous interview to a satisfactory climax. At sight of them Leopold felt himself hemmed in, forced, overwhelmed as usual when they together bore down on him.

He sank in the window seat and put a trembling hand to his forehead. He thought, "She was destined for me, she was almost mine, and they will take her away."

"His Imperial Majesty," said Christian, "refuses my terms."

At that, Leopold heard the two others, minister and priest, talking together; harshly, impatiently, persuading him, reproaching him, putting him with State arguments till his head ached and his heart sickened.

And what had he to oppose to all this wisdom?

A few moments in a wood at sunset.

His two tormentors persisted, to the limit of the endurance of his nerves; they seemed to him to be bearing down on him, enclosing him with their dark figures, their old, harsh faces, their insistent voices; and, worse than them even, he was conscious of General Crack, silent, assured, waiting with the sleek patience of a beast certain of its prey.

After half an hour of this torture, Leopold gave way, with a shudder of disgust for himself, with a quiver of hatred for them.

"Settle it, then!" he cried to Hensdorff. "Only let me begone. Ay, you are all very cunning, but this may be a bad day's work for some of you—"

Christian's dark eyes, void of all expression, turned slowly on him as he gave this threat, which he himself felt to be futile. It was the last humiliation for Leopold that his rival showed no sign of triumph; now that Christian had gained his point he preserved the same icy indifference that he had shown while it was in debate, a hateful pose, this, of godlike calm!

Passionately, Leopold wished that he could emulate such serenity; as he left them he was swearing hotly to himself, "If I ever have any power I will break that man—God, how I will break him!"

He wished to leave Schönbuschel without being observed, but he was not so fortunate as to achieve this. While he was hurriedly having his horse out (for he meant to ride at once and alone to Vienna), Eleonora came out on one of the little bowed balconies over the forecourt. She had been much patted that morning, for her father had told the Duchess the secret of Captain Leopold's identity, of the betrothal.

She smiled candidly at the young man, for she had been assured that he had come to be her companion and that she might walk with him in the woods and along the banks of the Danube, for they wished her to know her destined husband.

"Now, today, when Charlotte is ready, we can take that walk in the forest," she said, as she tied the wide ribbons of her straw hat under her chin. "It is so beautiful! And we can picnic in the woods."

These words were like a blow over the heart to Leopold. He stared at her so strangely that she thought him ill, and a tender concern clouded her gaiety.

"Something has happened?" she faltered.

"I must go back to Vienna," he answered. "I shall never be able to walk in those woods—"

"Oh, don't go!" cried Eleonora piteously. She had dreamt of him all night. "Back to the city, when here it is so lovely!"

"It is not for me," said Leopold in bitter distress. He could not bring himself to say "good-bye" but mounted and rode away.

But he must pause again, for by the gates was the Duchess, leaning on her stick, alarmed at his departure, at his hurried looks. He saluted her mechanically and she dropped a trembling curtsy.

"Sire," she stammered, "they tell me that you are the Emperor—"

"They tell you wrong, Madam," he replied, "for I am nothing, nothing."

He rode away, alone.

PLANS TO MAKE WINNER OUT OF BOSTON BRAVES

By James L. Kilzallen
I. N. S. Sports Writer
ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Mar. 8.—Manager William B. McKechnie plans to make a winning ball club out of the tail-end Boston Braves, he confidently asserted in an interview today as he stood on the third base line at Waterfront Park here today and peered at his players in practice.

"I have never been on a losing ball club and I don't intend to be on one this year," said McKechnie.

He was a distinct success as a manager of the Pittsburgh and St. Louis National League clubs in previous campaigns. He is the manager who had the unique distinction of having been let out by the Cardinals after he had won a pennant because his team collapsed in the World Series.

McKechnie is starting all over from the scratch. He has taken over the management of the Braves under a three year contract.

A younger, peppier Boston Club is McKechnie's aim for 1930. He declined to make any prediction regarding where the Braves will finish but declared "we are very optimistic."

"We are building up," he explained. "We got rid of some of the old fellows and are taking on new material."

McKechnie smiled when his attention was called to the veteran "Rabbit" Maranville prancing around at short like a colt and old Hank Gowdy crouching behind the home plate. He declared there is "plenty of good ball left in Maranville." As for Gowdy, he will be McKechnie's mainstay in coaching pitchers. He is on the roster as a catcher but he will do very little receiving.

"I am going to do a lot of experimenting before I announce the make-up of the club," said McKechnie. "We have twenty-seven exhibition games carded with major league teams and I should be able to get a good line on my players before the gong rings."

"I think we'll show some real pitching. The pitching staff is comprised of good young fellows like Eddie Brandt, Bruce Cunningham, Ben Cantwell, Johnny Cooney, Harry Selbold and Bob Smith. That's a pretty formidable and experienced collection."

McKechnie is studying a number of promising youngsters, including Ray Flaherty, Alonzo Smith, Bob Brown, and John Clough. Flaherty is here from Spokane, Wash., on the recommendation of Lefty Brandt. Flaherty is a right hander. So is Smith who was recalled from the Providence Club of the Eastern League. Clough hails from Blue Hill, Me., and was signed on the recommendation of Freddy Parent, a former Red Sox infielder. The fourth, Brown, is a six footer whose home is in Hull, Mass.

"Al Spohrer is my best bet as a catcher," said McKechnie. "I need another good backstop. Cronin, recalled from Baltimore last year, looks pretty good."

"First base will be taken care of by either Johnny Neun, drafted from Baltimore, or George Sisler. George Sisler's legs are in good shape for another hard campaign."

"I have Freddie Maguire for second. He is a great fielder but the club needs batting punch. Bob James, recalled from Baltimore and Russell Rollings drafted from Hollywood, are candidates for the job."

"Maranville and Jack Kahn will fight it out for the shortstop position. Kahn, formerly with the Cardinals, made an extra base record with Albany and Manchester. He looks good."

"I am forced to try Outfielder Walter Berger whom we purchased from Los Angeles at third base. He is only 24, six feet two, is fast and can field as well as hit."

Art Shires' Brother in Tryout With N.Y. Giants

A batting pose of Len Shires, younger brother of Arthur ("Art the Great") Shires, Chicago White Sox infielder. Len is confident of his baseball ability and is now receiving a tryout with the New York Giants. (International Newsreels)

"The outfield will be taken care of by Richbourg, Clark and Welsh. I am going to see what Moore, whom we bought from Dallas, and Bratcher, drafted from Denver, can do in the outfield. They may be able to make the grade."

Reports Indicate Prosperous Year For Travel Club

Legislative committee work was mentioned by Mrs. Bradley Ardrey, with Mrs. John Moyer telling of the activities of the educational committee for the chairman, Mrs. Richard T. Myers. Mrs. Caroline Smith told of the publicity work; while Mrs. Armand V. Morris' report for the reciprocity committee was given by Mrs. James LaRue.

Those who were elected to serve the club as officers for the ensuing year are: President, Mrs. Frank Lehman; vice-president, Miss Frances Landreth; recording secretary, Mrs. Horace Burton; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. Doyle Webb; treasurer, Mrs. Thomas G. Hawkes.

The club went on record as endorsing the county library movement, following the reading of an article relative to same by the president.

The annual address of the president was a source of interest yesterday.

Mrs. Lehman's thoughts reverted to the time when the group dreamed of a club home, and spoke of the happiness of all in realizing it. This, she stated, she regards as the most distinctive piece of work of the club year. "I am grateful to the members of the standing committees for the fine assistance I have received. Any request I make of them is never in vain." She told of her hopes for the institution of a junior section, trusting it will be organized during the next year.

Appreciation of the club for Mrs. Lehman's able leadership and splendid work was voiced when each member rose to her feet.

An invitation has been received by the club to attend a guest-day meeting of the Emerson Club, Philadelphia, March 18th. "Kipling in Song and Story" will be the theme, the program to be presented at the Plastic Club. The group will likewise indulge in a trip to the Art Museum, Philadelphia, on Friday, March 21st. At the next meeting of the local club April 4th, "The Charm of Gardens" will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Hare.

The large choir will sing at all services.

The Senior Epworth League will meet on Monday at 8 p. m. Boy Scouts will meet on Tuesday at 7.30 p. m.; choir rehearsal on Tuesday at 8 p. m. Prayer meeting will be on Wednesday evening at 7.45 in charge of Mrs. Reba Miller. Junior League meets on Friday at 6.45 p. m.

The Harmony Trumpeters will be the special musical feature next Sunday evening, March 16th.

TWIN-IGNITION MEANS—
Greater Power, Greater Smoothness, Extraordinary Economy

BECAUSE two different motor cars are alike in price, it does not follow that they are also alike in quality, value or performance. There is always a best, and if you are looking for it, drive a Nash Twin-Ignition Eight or Six. They are the only cars in their price field which offer the superiority of Twin-Ignition performance.

¶ Twin-Ignition (two spark plugs, two simultaneous sparks, per cylinder, instead of one) produces smoother, more thorough combustion and consequently a smoother, more vigorous flow of power. You can feel the difference. You will know immediately what you have been missing, driving a car with single ignition.

¶ Other "400" features of superior performance and value are Bijur centralized chassis lubrication; lifetime-lubricated springs, encased in steel spring covers; built-in, automatic radiator shutters; and Duplate non-shatterable plate glass in all windows, doors and windshields (no extra cost in the Twin-Ignition Eight—optional at slight extra cost in the Twin-Ignition Six and Single Six).
